Imperial Male Minstrels.

The performance of the Imperial Male Minstrels was given before a large audience Thursday evening, at the Opera House.

The stage presented a gay appearance with its red and purple chair covers and crimson background, each side flanked by a large American flag.

The interlude, Ned Burnett wore a Louis XVI suit. The black faced men wore scarlet and yellow and the orchestra of seven pieces furnished excellent music.

The big hit of the evening was Ralph Andrews' encore to his song, "Over the Ocean Wave from Home." "And the whole Dan Family Stuck Around."

This was a parody on the song about Freeland Howe's dancing class.

Jameson Finney's work as end man was excellent and his song "On the 5:15" was given a round of applause.

Wm. Horne's solo "Over the Ocean Wave" was undoubtedly the musical gem of the evening. "Brutus" Farnham's song "Where the Southern Roses Grow" with chorus by Fred and Harold Moore and "Buster" Brown was excellent.

Features of the O'Learys' work were the beautiful work of the Imperial quartette, H. and F. Moore, H. W. Brown and Harold Anderson, who sang popular songs in a pleasing manner with Mrs. Fred Moore at the piano. "Those Classy Boys" and "Two from Home," in a manner typical of two homesick youths. The end men comedians entertained the audience with their humorous skits.

A surprise not given on the program was the graceful dancing of Richard Mathewson from Oxford and Florence Moberg of New York.

The last number was the clever musical act of Win Kimball the "Popular Sketch Artist." The whole show was very well presented and all the parts well taken. Following the show a dance was given by Shaw's Orchestra.

A Suprise Concert.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Stone was the scene of a very delightful social affair last Friday evening, when Beatrice Stone, assisted by Mrs. Elmer Packard, gave a farewell surprise party to Clara B. Shepard. Since Miss Shepard is to continue her musical study at the New England Conservatory of Music next year, the events of the evening took the form of a concert.

After an usher issued programs to the audience, the first number was found to be a Footlight Test by Noyes. This consisted of walking a tape while looking through a pair of inverted opera glasses.

In the Orchestra Trials by Sousa each guest was required to play an imaginary instrument and the others were supposed to guess the instrument intended.

Since no gathering of maidens is complete without a glimpse into the alluring future, Miss Shepard's future was disclosed to her friends by means of the third number with the suggestion of "Love's Old Sweet Song." This was rendered by Mrs. Carl E. Stone, who read a portion of the story, and by Marion Gibson, who played selections with suitable words on the piano. Each guest entered on her program the names of the songs whenever she could recognize them.

The musical ability of each young lady was proved by the rendering of musical selections from Chopin. Each one was required to play some familiar tune on a comb and the others guessed the title.

All of the guests rendered the Grand Final by playing together on combs.

The first prize for concert work was awarded to Mildred Curtis and the booby prize to Christine Leavitt.

At this moment the doors were opened and the dining room, dressed in pink and white and lighted by candles, was revealed in all its daintiness. Before the performers were allowed to partake of its inviting refreshments, they were obliged to walk a tight rope, which was held by a pair of real leather, which were hidden about the room. A delicious lunch of crab salad, hot rolls, pineapple frappe, macaroons and other dainties were served.

At the close of the evening, Miss Shepard was asked to play on the violin, in the playing of which she is a young artist of much promise. She was much surprised to find her violin case filled with gifts from friends. Good wishes completed this very happy musical evening.

Those invited were Misses Clara Shepard, Marion Gibson, Mildred Curtis, Mildred Noyes, Doris Shepard, Christine Leavitt, Ruth Noble, Pearl Foster, Myra Noble, Winnifred McKean, Rena Wood and Eula K. Bicknell.

The Veranda Club Outing.

The second annual outing of the Veranda Club was held on Friday, September 3rd. An auto trip around the White Mountains was enjoyed by a party of friends uniting with the Club numbering 21.

The party left Norway at 5:45 a. m., going by the way of Gorham, N. H. The places of interest visited by the party were the "Cascades," "Glen House," "Glen-Elliott Falls," "At this point we enjoyed a picnic dinner and a very pleasant hour combined."

The afternoon was spent in auto riding through the beautiful village of North Conway and various other towns.

The party arrived at the "Old Home," where a picnic dinner and lunch was served. After which souvenirs were purchased, also post cards which were sent to absent club members.

The next place of interest was "Denmark Lodge," where the party again enjoyed a social picnic supper on the veranda which overlooks a beautiful body of water.

The event was one of the best the Club has ever gotten up. The autos were in charge of Frank Starbird and everything concerning the trip was a success. All arrived home in the early evening, having spent the day so pleasantly, hardly realizing that we have such grand scenery about us. It was regretted that some of the club members owing to sickness were unable to attend.

AN OLD FOGY

So Thought the Other Fellows.
His fellow workmen used to laugh at him when he was a young man. They said he was old-fashioned, out of date, and they told him he was missing the best of his life. He got about twelve dollars a week in those days—never mind his name; he is still working right along—and now he gets eighteen and sometimes twenty.

They thought he was queer. You see, he used to take his money home and give it to his wife—all of it. She was the family banker. Though he was a young man in those days, he never seemed to have time for hanging around the saloon. There was always something to do at home. His wife wasn't very strong, and in those days there was generally a baby or two that needed attention.

Then he had a garden that kept him busy in the summer, and a shop where he used to do odd jobs for himself or the neighbors, and there were chickens to look after and sometimes eggs to market. The boys in the shop thought he was an old fogy.

Well, he is old now, and how does it stand with him. He owns the home he lives in, and it's a good one, and he owns another that rents for more than he ever used to pay when he was young. His children are grown; they all went through high school, and one of the boys went to college. They are the kind of children that the neighbors say "turned out well."

He has a comfortable bank account in his wife's name—and he goes right along spending just a little less than he earns. And the old boys in the shop, what few there are left of them, will tell you the understand his wife had some money left her, and that's what gave him his start. And they are right, in a way. She had some money left her every Saturday night.

If you ask the old man how he did it he'll tell you he didn't do it—he did it. And that's right, too, in a way. It takes two to play that kind of a game, and it isn't an easy one, making the money go every week just a bit less than the income. And there are a great many other things to be taken into account. For, after all, thrift is a habit of mind, it's a way of looking at life, and nothing is too big or too little to have a place in it.

Wise buying, careful saving in the household, the prevention of waste in all manner of little ways, such things as these cost for much in the course of a year, and they count for a great deal in the course of a lifetime. But they all lead up to the main thing, which is keeping out of debt and putting a little money every month into the savings bank.

It doesn't take financial genius to do it. Hundreds of thrifty people are doing it. Any one can try it. And the advantage in working at it is this, that whether a man is going to turn business upside down and make a name for himself in the commercial world or is simply going to go steadily along as a reliable workman, his success in life depends, first of all, upon thrift.—Berlin Reporter.

Why it Seems to Rain in Streaks Instead of in Drops.
When it is raining just what does one drop. We know that the rain consists of drops, nearly spherical, falling either vertically or at an angle (if the wind be blowing). But what do we see? We see streaks through the air and not drops at all. The reason is that the eye cannot follow the raindrop in its flight and so cannot see just the drop continually.

The eye gets only one glimpse of the drop in one position, while an impression is made on the retina for some distance by the drop moving.

If the drop were still we could look at it as long as we chose, and the image of the drop would be in just one place on the retina, but if we let the drop escape from our direct view it makes an image, or rather, a succession of images, on the retina, and that is what we see.

But why does the retina show this succession of images? It certainly seems as any one time the drop in just one position so it would seem that the last position seen would be the one. This is not the case and the cause is due to what is known as persistence of vision. We cannot quite see a thing immediately after getting a view of it. It takes about an eighth of a second for the retina to lose an image, and so this succession of images will be on the retina at one time and will cause a streak.

For the same reason the spokes of a rapidly rotating wheel cannot be seen except as a blur. For the same reason moving pictures are possible.—New York American.

The Disappearing Horses

The Commercial recently noted the difficulties met by a Bangor horse dealer in his attempts to purchase a carload of horses in the West. He was obliged to visit several markets before he was successful and everywhere found that the demand from the numerous countries in Europe is greatly depleting the supply in this country. The extent to which our horses are being sent abroad is shown in part by the statement that 200,000 horses have already passed over the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad to Newport News, Va., to be shipped abroad.

As the war continues, the demand for American horses will increase rather than diminish and attracted by the high prices paid, the dealers will make every effort to supply the demand. Not only does this mean that our own people must pay increased prices for horses but it indicates that in the immediate future this country may find itself with far too few horses to supply the necessary business demand. Of course there are the motor vehicles, the call for which for commercial and agricultural use is becoming constantly more strident but the horse can never be fully replaced.—Bangor Commercial.

WHEN THE FARM ANIMAL IS WOUNDED

In the past, when barbed wire constituted the great bulk of the material used for fencing purposes, wounds on the farm animals were far more common than today. Yet even now, occasionally a valuable cow or horse comes in from the pasture bringing with him a gaping wound that may have been caused by any one of several things. The ability to dress this wound so that it will heal rapidly and leave as little blemish as possible is quite an asset to the farmer or any of the family who happen to possess the required requisites. I have seen such wounds left gaping and a great blemish would result, while on the other hand, even a single stitch would have relieved the difficulty and increased the value of the animal by a good many dollars.

The moment an animal appears with such a wound, drop other work and attend to it at once, for it may mean a saving of dollars. And I is to wash the hands thoroughly. One cannot be too thorough about this, for surgery was never a pronounced success until the great English surgeon demonstrated that most of the infections arising from wounds resulted by contaminations from the hands or instruments of the operator. For the hand wash, use boiled water, adding 15 or 20 drops of carbolic acid to each quart of water. Use a good hand brush and soap; wash the hands thoroughly, being especially careful to get the portions about the nails clean. Of course, any of the patented disinfectants are all right if used according to the recommendations of the manufacturers.

Now one is ready to wash the sore. It must be cleaned out before it can heal. Use carbolic acid water in the same proportions as in the hand wash, being sure that the water has been boiled. A cloth is so likely to become polluted that I find a cotton sponge more satisfactory. Twenty-five cents' worth of absorbent cotton will make a good many sponges and will last for a long time. Break off pieces of this cotton and put into the wash water. These may be taken out of the water, and after using to sponge out the wound, may be thrown away. Be thorough in cleansing the wound.

In the meantime, if the cut is one that should be sewed up, and a surgeon's needle and thread are not at hand, do not leave the wound dangerously gaping for want of a needle. I have seen good work done with an ordinary farming needle and good linen thread, provided these were clean. If these are all that are available, put the darned needle and some white linen thread in a pie tin on the stove, cover with water and allow to boil about 10 minutes. With clean hands, clean sore, and sanitary thread and needle, proceed to take as many stitches as are needed having them about three-quarters of an inch apart and not getting too near the edge of the wound. Leave the ends of the stitches a little long, so that they may be cut in seven or eight days with a pair of scissors. These, of course, should also be subjected to boiling. If the sides of the sore should get dry, grease them with vaseline. Remember that a healthy body is all that can heal such a gap; internal remedies are of no account in this connection. Greasing the sides of the sore will make them knit together more quickly and easily. If the sore starts to run, it may be necessary to sponge it off as often as it needs it, with carbolic water.

Especially in fly time, flies will either lay eggs in the sore or carry infection to it, and it is necessary to keep them away. The Department of Agriculture recommends the following: Formula 1. Oil of tar, 8 ounces; cottonseed meal to make 32 ounces. Formula 2. Powdered naphthalin, 2 ounces; hydrous wool fat, 14 ounces. Formula 3. Coal tar, 12 ounces; carbon disulphid, 4 ounces.

Mix well and apply with a brush. These are mixed into an ointment. Remember that carbon disulphid easily turns into a gas, and so the bottle must be well stoppered. The mixture can be applied with a brush. Carbon disulphid is also highly inflammable, and so lights or heat should be kept away from it. In the case of a very bad wound, a skilled veterinarian should be called, but many times one of these cannot be had and so immediate action is necessary to prevent further injury to the animal.

The mixture can be applied with a brush. Carbon disulphid is also highly inflammable, and so lights or heat should be kept away from it. In the case of a very bad wound, a skilled veterinarian should be called, but many times one of these cannot be had and so immediate action is necessary to prevent further injury to the animal.

Formula 1. Oil of tar, 8 ounces; cottonseed meal to make 32 ounces. Formula 2. Powdered naphthalin, 2 ounces; hydrous wool fat, 14 ounces. Formula 3. Coal tar, 12 ounces; carbon disulphid, 4 ounces.

Mix well and apply with a brush. These are mixed into an ointment. Remember that carbon disulphid easily turns into a gas, and so the bottle must be well stoppered. ### A VENTURE IN GEESSE RAISING.

By Mrs. Sarah E. Bates Barlett.
The third type of animal marriage is that common among wild geese, pigeons and doves. The union lasts through life, and if one of the pair dies the other never seeks a second mate, but mourns disconsolately till death. The swan is a large web-footed bird like the goose. The loon is a swimming, diving bird of the arctic regions, her egg is the size of a goose egg, and is of a light gray color. I have seen their nests and had their eggs in my hand.

I bought a pair of geese in the fall, and along in March they began to lay; they were young geese, so I couldn't tell what luck I might have with them. It was said by those who raised geese, "if the gander proved to be good to the goslings, I should have good luck," and he was. I gave them the best care I could, for I thought I had undertaken quite a venture. The gander and I did not quarrel, but one quarrel, and we settled it on the spot. Faithful old birdie, I treated him so roughly, but I had to fight just then, for he struck me so hard with the bone end of his wing it really hurt me. I was afraid I had killed him, for he lay on the ground a minute, then got up and went out and took his place beside his mate. She came off soon after with eight or nine little goslings, one or two of which soon after died. I took them away and decided I would bring them up by hand, as there were only six then. I thought in that way I would get another brood, for I had bought another goose, and was in hopes I might see them both at the same time which I did. They hatched very well, and I had a pretty flock. As soon as they got strong enough I put the two flocks together. I did not expect they would accept of my flock, but my wise and brave old gander resolved not to have any idols in his family, and all seemed happy together. The little ones I had cared for so long, could not forget me so easily and every time they saw me out they would leave the rest and come to me. The gander would always stand and look so distressed but never gave me the battle. The other geese and the flock of goslings would always leave him standing on guard as it seemed.

One day I heard him calling very loud, qua, qua, qua. I could see the other geese off some ways from where he stood, mother geese had indeed "forgotten" her children. I judged from the loud calling there must be some trouble, so went up into the pasture, and there the gander stood beside a place where some of the goslings had dropped into a place the water had washed out (it was a very springy and wet place) and quite a large brook run along there too. I got a hoe and dug away till I found three of my little goslings, the faithful old gander all the time standing by and not offering any objections, for we had an understanding. As soon as I pulled the last one out he stepped along, put his head down to them in a loving way, and jabbered away as though he was trying to comfort them.

The garden was near by the pasture, and seemed to offer them many attractions, but as my dear old gander understood me so well when he could hear me I did not have much trouble, for he would quickly lead them out of mischief, as well as lead them in.

I plucked them all twice, and the gander once extra for his sauce to me on one occasion. I used to put a stocking on over his head when I plucked him, but I got many a pinch, and there would be many black and blue spots on my arms the next day. From the feathers I made a nice pair of pillows which have been in use fifty-five years, and they

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.
In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.
To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

BRYANT'S POND

The Boy Tourist.
Duke Thompson, the boy tourist, who has been working his way and sight seeing for three months in the west and south is expected home soon.
After leaving San Diego, Cal., he visited Yosemite Park, the Grand Canyon and the Redwood Forests in Arizona, the Garden of the Gods in Colorado and took the trip up onto Pike's Peak, the highest railroad in the world. The elevation at the point where the road begins is 6,309 feet, the summit is 14,147 feet above sea level, thus the cog railroad climbs nearly 8,000 feet in its journey to the summit, which covers a distance of 15 miles. He walked to the top and rode back. He says the high altitude makes it hard climbing and it is a trip that a nervous man best not attempt.

From Colorado he went to different points in Nebraska to Kansas City, St. Louis and East St. Louis to Cincinnati, Ohio, there taking the B. & O. R. R. to West Virginia, where he will visit his sister, then return to Maine coming through Washington, D. C. He says the old State of Maine is as good as any of them, at least it seems that way to him.

While he has been up against some hard problems, he mastered them, and never for a moment regretted that he started.

All Men Respect
The Hudson

Has that fact impressed you?

There are no HUDSON critics.

Many buy other cars because they are cheaper. Or because they are higher—high enough to be unique. Or because they are novel in some other respect.

But all of these men respect HUDSONS. They respect the judgment of men who buy them. That's evident everywhere.

Note Its Buyers

About 95 per cent are experienced motorists. About 28 per cent have owned higher-priced cars.

They are motor-wise and fastidious. As a class they are men accustomed to the best. They are quality buyers who demand value. They don't care to pay for mere excess or show. They want no passing fad. They are buying, in most part, for keeps.

There are multitudes of such men now. And since June 15—when this new model appeared—they have bought over 5000 HUDSONS.

They Are Right

These men are right.

The six-cylinder engine, with its continuous power, is the ultimate in motors.

The HUDSON type—high speed, small bore, long stroke—has become the universal standard in a Six.

Excess weight is crudity. There never was a stancher car than the HUDSON, despite its lightness, which is unmatched in any 7-passenger Six.

No car carries more passengers. None has more needed room. None has more comfort, luxury, quality or class.

And none more beauty than this new model. It brings out the Yacht-Line body, the Lustrous finish, enameled leather upholstery, and many other final touches.

If you buy a car in this class this season you are bound to want the HUDSON. You will not find a rival in sight of it. But you can't get a HUDSON, in all probability, unless you order soon. The demand for this car is exceeding all expectations.

SOUTH PARIS

Mrs. John S. Brown, wife of John S. Brown, died at her home in South Paris on Monday, August 23. Mrs. Brown was the daughter of Melvin and Frances (York) Stowe, was born in Newry, Maine June 13, 1853.

She was educated in the public schools and Goulis Academy, and was a successful teacher for several years. She was married June 19, 1879 to John S. Brown of Newry, where they made their home and three sons were born to them.

It was while living there and the children were small, she used to gather the children of the neighborhood at her home on Sunday afternoon for a little religious service and Sunday school.

Years ago she came with her family to South Paris. She was a member of the Universalist Church and prominent in the work of the Grange.

Her illness covers a little more than eight months, much of the time around and out as usual, but confined to her bed the last four weeks, from which she directed the work of the home, keeping in close touch with all the little details up to a few days of her death. She loved her home and family and often said, "I want to get well, but it is all right."

The end came peacefully.

The funeral was held at the home, attended by Rev. Chester G. Miller and burial was at sunset in Riverside Cemetery. The silver gray casket was covered and surrounded by beautiful flowers, a silent tribute of neighbors and friends.

Besides her husband, she leaves three sons, Sanford M. of South Paris, and Everett D. and D. Grover, who are teachers in Porto Rico. Mrs. Brown is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Teresa S. Grover and Mrs. Susie E. Chapman both of South Paris.

Her immediate family and a large circle of friends, her memory is blessed. "One can never think of death with such ease. It is life, always life, and life more abundant."

"We cannot really think of her as being far away. Her love, we trust, is with us still, unfading day by day. For God is true and we but feel our Father would not part the loved one from the soul, which sheds its rays of light. Thus in our loss, through grief and pain, through our darkest night, lives on this hope, gleaming star, which sheds its rays of light. An inspiration unto us, which quickens, deepens trust. Which leads up, on yea, heavenward, as such an example to us."

"Until that wondrous glory breaks, when some day you and I approach the ' Gates of Heaven ' to find our loved ones, those dear, beloved, blessed ones, who journey on before. ' O death! Where is thy sting? ' O grave! Thy life forevermore."

Fresh Tobacco Never Bites; Dry, Cut-up Tobacco Does

Real tobacco flavor depends upon the leaf being preserved in its natural state, possible only by pressing the leaves into plug form and keeping it in by covering it with a natural leaf wrapper. The natural flavor and strength of tobacco escape when cut or granulated.

Take a Plug of Sickle that is even thoroughly dried out so that when you whittle it off it crumbles into dust, but it will burn and smoke smooth and cool as it has all of its original tobacco flavor preserved, unevaporated in Plug Form.

Whittling a pipeful is little trouble, amply repaid both quality and quantity. Try this experiment and judge for yourself.

NORTH BRIDGTON.

Near Automobile Fatality.

John Evans of Sweden, in company with Mrs. A. M. Lehman, wife of one of the directors of Camp Wigwam at South Waterford, barely escaped death a few days ago on the Waterford road, when the car, a Ford runabout, owned by Mr. Evans, ran off the bridge and turned turtle into the stream below, a distance of about two feet.

As they were coming around a bend, they met a large touring car on the bridge and the small car was crowded off the bridge. Mr. Evans was pinned under the car, with just his head out of water. The occupants of the larger car gave him assistance possible and with the help of J. B. Allen, succeeded in getting him from under the car.

He and Mrs. Lehman were taken at once to Waterford and physicians summoned who found Mr. Evans with three broken fingers and three broken ribs. Mrs. Lehman suffered no broken bones, but both were severely shaken up. The car was damaged to the extent of a new body.
